BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY
HAWAII
[This is] what this school is being built [for] . . . First, for things pertaining to God and his kingdom, a testimony of the existence of Deity, to know that He lives and that He is our Father, the Father of all mankind and ruler of brothers; what that means toward peace, establishing peace in the world. Secondly, that those who are obeying those principles will develop manhood, character, and make noble men and women. The world needs them. One man said the world needs men who cannot be bought or sold, men who will scorn to violate truth, genuine gold. That is what this school is going to produce. More than that, they’ll be leaders. Not leaders only in this island, but everywhere. All the world is hungering for them, and best of all, the world is recognizing them.

President David O. McKay
President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints
Remarks given at the groundbreaking services for the Church College of Hawaii, later named Brigham Young University–Hawaii, February 12, 1955
BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY–HAWAII is the preeminent international center of learning in the Pacific. Its small campus is a unique laboratory of intercultural leadership development, where a diverse population of 2,700 students representing over 75 countries live, study, and work together. Small classes taught by qualified faculty empower students to master challenging and relevant curriculum, while affordable tuition, financial aid, and online study options make this valuable education more accessible than ever. Operated by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, a total BYU–Hawaii education involves not only intellectual learning and career preparation, but also moral, ethical, and spiritual enrichment. All the while, students enjoy living and learning in one of the most beautiful places on earth. Graduates go forth to serve, prepared to promote peace and prosperity as leaders worldwide.

OUR MISSION:
To integrate both spiritual and secular learning, and to prepare students with character and integrity who can provide leadership in their families, their communities, their chosen field, and in building the kingdom of God.
The spirit of Brigham Young University–Hawaii is illuminated by the radiance of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Men and women from throughout the Pacific Rim and beyond gather to BYU–Hawaii because they are committed to strong moral and ethical values, and they wish to learn and work among others who share this same commitment. Students serve in leadership positions in church wards across campus, developing faith, charity, and a sense of caring toward one another. Faith-building religion courses also foster spiritual growth and doctrinal understanding. Each week, the University ‘ohana (family) gathers together for Devotional, a general campus assembly where outstanding speakers teach with words of inspiration. Thus, graduates embark not only with sound minds, but also with profound character and deep faith.

Learning by Study and by Faith

Coming to this great institution, BYU–Hawaii, has greatly strengthened my faith and testimony. Here you can freely discuss Gospel principles in class alongside other subjects, and this combination of secular and spiritual learning has been such a great blessing.

One thing that really impresses me about BYU-Hawaii is that I am not only being prepared to become a successful businessman, but I am taught how following the teachings of Christ will give me an advantage in the business world. This university is special.

THE EXCELLENT education BYU–Hawaii offers begins with relevant, up-to-date curriculum. In every academic program, students are equipped with the essential skills and knowledge needed for success in their future careers and scholarly pursuits. In line with the University’s international character, this curriculum is unbounded by narrow regional perspectives and draws upon the entire world of scholarship. However, realizing that today’s best ideas can be tomorrow’s obsolete trivia, students also “learn how to learn”—they learn to study, research, and practice. They are taught to test and challenge established principles, forming their own ideas and flowering new trains of thought. Students are also actively encouraged to seek valuable educational opportunities outside the classroom through internships, research projects, entrepreneurial enterprises, and work experience. The goal is to instill a love of knowledge that will produce a lifetime of learning.

PERSONAL INTERACTION between faculty and students is another hallmark of BYU–Hawaii. With a low student/faculty ratio, students have great opportunities to learn and grow from their professors. Faculty members are committed to knowing their students personally, spending time with them beyond regular classroom hours, and becoming their mentors. Countless alumni have attributed life-changing moments to individual professors who have had the insight and concern to make a difference when it is most needed. Professors see their role as much more than teaching courses—they are developing and guiding the world's next generation of leaders.

My professor for my Interdisciplinary Studies class had great enthusiasm for the subject he taught. He cared about my progression and really cared about me personally. He was so easy to talk to and he helped me succeed.

THE STUDENTS OF BYU–HAWAII comprise a brilliant collection of talents, abilities, and backgrounds from the world over. Many speak two or more languages, including a number who have completed missions for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Brought together, they contribute to a vibrant campus community, where warmth and the spirit of aloha prevail. Students learn to appreciate diverse customs, accept varied perspectives, and foster cooperation, developing friendships that transcend political and cultural boundaries. A large percentage of students also work at on-campus jobs or at the neighboring Polynesian Cultural Center, instilling a sense of teamwork and stewardship while gaining marketable skills and work experience to expand their leadership potential.

I knew nothing about Pacific Rim cultures before coming here, and now I have learned so much regarding values and traditions. Even my perspective on my own culture has changed.

AFFORDABILITY AT BYU–HAWAII starts with some of the lowest tuition rates in the nation when compared to other private comprehensive universities—an amazing feat considering its location in one of the country’s most expensive states. Online class options, offered at an even lower rate, also allow students to access a quality BYU–Hawaii education from anywhere in the world.

Beyond these already low costs, over 70% of students receive some form of financial aid. The University offers a variety of scholarships, including many from private philanthropists. Federal aid is available through Pell Grants, TEACH Grants, Stafford Loans, and Parent PLUS Loans. Many students earn additional funds through part-time employment on campus and at the Polynesian Cultural Center.

BYU–Hawaii also offers a unique financial aid program for eligible international students who could not otherwise afford an education. This program, known as I-WORK, offers a 50 percent grant and 50 percent forgivable loan to qualified international students. In exchange, I-WORK participants agree to maintain full-time status, act in high moral standing, and contribute to the cost of their education through work-study opportunities. I-WORK enables graduates to return to their home country debt-free and qualified to provide leadership in church, civic, and social affiliations, and within their families.

SEASIDERS EXCEL in athletic competition. BYU–Hawaii teams have won 24 national championships, and nine Seasiders have earned national individual or doubles titles. The University currently fields teams in eleven varsity sports: men’s and women’s cross country, men’s and women’s tennis, women’s volleyball, men’s and women’s basketball, men’s and women’s soccer, men’s golf, and women’s softball. Many students also participate in an extensive intramural sports program and stay in shape by taking advantage of the outstanding sports facilities on campus, including tennis and racquetball courts, softball and soccer fields, a swimming pool, dance studio, and fitness center.

ATHLETICS

The crowning venue of BYU–Hawaii’s athletic facilities is the George Q. Cannon Activities Center, which seats 4,500 fans for basketball and volleyball, both of which are played on a professional-grade floor built over an air space for maximum playing comfort and spring. The CAC houses locker rooms, athletic offices, music rooms, classrooms, and hosting areas. The building is also used for weekly Devotionals, commencement exercises, concerts, and numerous campus and community events.
HISTORICALLY KNOWN as a place of refuge, the quiet community of Laie lies at the edge of the ocean, against a backdrop of green mountains and misty valleys. The town basks in abundant sun, while cooling trade winds and the gentle sound of lapping tides complete an atmosphere of peace and tranquility. Residents are warm and welcoming, always vigilant for one another’s well-being. Many have close ties to the University; students and professors will often find each other in the aisles of the local supermarket or at the beach. Local amenities within walking distance of campus include a shopping center, restaurants, a movie theater, and easy access to Hukilau and Pounders beaches. Laie is also within convenient proximity to the world-famous beaches of the North Shore, including Sunset Beach, Shark’s Cove, Waimea Bay, and Ehukai Beach, home of the “Banzai Pipeline.”
BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY–HAWAI’I began as a vision. BYU–Hawaii was established to produce leaders committed to building the kingdom of God and establishing peace internationally. Since 1955, BYU–Hawaii has held true to this mission and vision by ensuring that all students have been educated spiritually, culturally, and academically. Graduates are not only employment-ready, but are men and women of integrity and character. They provide leadership in their families, in business, in their communities, and in building the kingdom of God, fulfilling the prophecy of David O. McKay, who proclaimed that this school would produce “leaders—not only on this island, but everywhere. All the world is hungering for them.”

AN EXPANDING LEGACY: DEVELOPING LEADERS FOR THE NATIONS

This is no ordinary college. It is a great institution, conceived in prophetic vision, with a great heritage and a tremendous and important destiny to fulfill.
